Notably, on the evening of Great and Holy Thursday and Great and Holy Friday, the Service of the Holy Passion and the Epitaphios were served at the Holy Cathedral of the Annunciation of the Theotokos, officiated by His Beatitude Patriarch Theodoros II, together with by the Hierarchs of the Alexandrian Throne His Eminence Panteleimon Metropolitan of Naukratis, and His Grace Nicodemus Bishop of Nilopolis.

The Primate of Alexandria thanked those who came and devoutly attended the Services, while addressing the two Hierarchs of the Throne, Metropolitan Panteleimon of Naukratis and Bishop Nicodemus of Nilopolis, he thanked them for serving the Patriarchate even as simple priests when needed, to show, as the Patriarch characteristically pointed out, that: "Our Patriarchate is missionary, it has a history, it has nobility, it has greatness, but also when necessary it serves as simply as Simon of Cyrene to lift the Heavy Cross of the centuries-old legacy that other orthodox brothers may have wanted to ignore but also add burdens to the Throne and to its Primate". His Beatitude continued... "My children, gazing at the Passion of Christ, I turn with pain to the thought of our Orthodox brothers in martyred Ukraine, where for 10 whole years just as tonight I conducted the Service of the Passion. That is why I commiserate with them and ask our crucified Christ to dry the blood of the children that flows unjustly, because they are not the cause of evil... children are always the hope of this world".

In conclusion, His Beatitude expressed the gratitude of the Patriarchate to His Excellency the President of the country of Egypt, as well as, in the person of the Consul General, thanking Mother Greece.
